...this is what we mean by “Epiphany”

Many years ago I walked into the main room of a lodge I had seen hundreds of times before. On one wall there was a fireplace which was the center of the room for most of the furniture was arranged facing the fireplace. At the moment, however, there was no one in the room. The room stood empty, waiting. Someone had laid logs and kindling in the hearth; everything was set.

Now I watched as a pageant began to unfold. A few people entered. As they took their seats facing the fireplace the host stooped, match in hand, and lit the fire. Soon the blaze caught and did what a fire always does in a hearth, it caught the eye and the attention of everyone in the room. Several people who were still standing off a bit came closer. As the fire grew, it sent off its warmth and light, filling the room, dancing on the polished brass, quieting the conversations. Then a third thing happened which I never know to fail when a fire has been lit in a hearth. Someone in the room confessed, “I love a fire.” Everyone agreed. There is something about a crackling blaze that puts people in a calmer mind and draws them together. It is hard to be a stranger before an open fire.

Now, that is exactly the way I feel about the Epiphany. On Christmas God lit a fire in the world, not only in the heavens, but down on earth, too, in the midst of that great room where people gather. The world was a cold and drafty room where people waited anxiously hopefully, for someone to light a fire in the hearth. God did. It was Christmas. The light was struck, the blaze rose up. Wise men saw it in the East, Shepherd’s on their hill, kings on their thrones. Christmas, like any fire in a room, gathered people to it, then cast light on their faces and touched them with a warm glow.

That is what we mean by the Epiphany. It is about gathering about the flame of Christmas to watch it burn and spread the light in the room, bringing forth from us adoring and wonderful words of praise, breathing its quietness in our spirits. In the light of Epiphany we are no longer strangers before the hearth and heart of God. We have become companions in a secure fellowship of light.

Epiphany begins January 6. According to tradition that is the moment the Magi arrived after their long trek across the wilderness. They were the first recorded gentiles to pay homage and to take their places before the transforming nature of the Christ child.

A fire in a hearth changes a room. So does Christmas change the world. The season of Epiphany follows in taking a measure of the rays that stream out of the most blessed moment in history, the Christ child’s birth. Let us live in Christ’s light during the season of Epiphany and beyond!

Together in Christ Jesus,
Pr. Eric

TRINITY'S FIVE & DIME

Welcome to “Trinity’s Five & Dime”. This section is dedicated to stories, experiences, and devotionals where together we can share God’s spiritual candy. Glory be to God for the opportunity to share with you some thoughts, experiences, and scripture regarding our everyday lives. May God continue to open our eyes, ears, minds, and hearts to all of the work He does in and around our lives. We praise you for your never-ending love, Amen.

Neil Paulsen

....Yet Moses did his best to come up with excuses why he shouldn’t be sent to Egypt, and we’ll come back to those excuses after a bit. As I look at Moses in this situation, I see similarities at certain tasks that I was given when I was growing up.

Say What?? (Part 2 of 8)

Whether it was something where I was to help Mom, or help Dad, I don’t recall any part of the conversation containing the words, “do you think you can?” Or, “Do you want to?” It was either, “I need you to.....or I want you to.....” There was never a place in the discussion for my opinion or my input. As a parent, we know our children and how they will respond if given a choice to a certain request. God knew Moses, and knew that there would be some pushback. And although it was a command from God, Moses still felt the need to give excuses why not to do it. And even in our own lives as children, there were times when we offered plenty of excuses why we didn’t need to do what our parents were requesting. I can see now as I look back as some of those experiences, that they were beneficial to me, and maybe even aided in the building of my character. And as children of God, and a God who knows us well enough that he has each of the hairs on our heads are numbered, we should react to his requests or commands with childlike faith, and with complete trust in him. One example that I can think of for me “to get out of the boat” happened when I was fairly young. I was probably 11 or 12 years old at the time, and it was a situation where I was needed to help my Dad in moving some farm equipment from one farm to another. If my memory serves me correct, there was a farmer from the Tennant area that was going through a rough spell, and through connections that Dad had from farming, and being the person that he was, he offered to help this particular farmer get his crops planted that spring. And being the young boy that I was, who would do whatever he could to be at his Dad’s side, I got a couple of opportunities to ride along with him in the pickup to look over the Tennant farm that spring. Oddly enough, the two or three times I went with him to look things over at the new farm ground, he took different routes to get over there, but I did my best to pay close attention as we went since this was unfamiliar scenery. Little did I know that that very same scenery was going to play a very important part in an upcoming task. As the spring progressed that year, Dad worked both his own ground, and the ground over by Tennant. When he was working in the fields close to home, I was usually able to find him after I would get home from school and finish out the day working with him. But when he was over at the Tennant farm, I had no way to get there, so trips there were very limited.

Focus on Ministry

OUTREACH MINISTRY

Our outreach ministry does lots of good things here thru Trinity. One that's been in the spotlight lately is their work with the school kids. The outreach ministry here at Trinity delivers 32 food bags to the school each Friday morning. These food bags, about the size of a large ziplock bag, and are filled with cereal, shelf milk, ravioli cups, apple sauce, and juice., as an example. The teachers then decide who might benefit from having these bags over the weekend. Teachers place the bags into the children's book bags when the classroom is empty of students. This program thru the outreach ministry is headed up by Lauren & Josh Guyer with the help of many volunteers. Just recently, Woodhouse, our food partner, had to cut back the number of bags they could send each week. So as a solution, the youth group joined forces with the outreach ministry and packed enough extra bags to make up the difference, so we could continue serving our community in this way. Please keep this ministry and its leaders in your prayers!
